

Common Antler Hunting Questions

Q. - Can residents and non-residents collect antlers in Wyoming?

A. – Yes, anyone can collect shed antlers in Wyoming. However, there are several big game winter ranges that have access restrictions during the winter months to protect wintering big game animals. Antler hunters should consult the land management agency or Game and Fish Department for the area they want to go before going.

Q. – Are there antler hunting seasons in Wyoming?

A. – There are no antler hunting seasons in Wyoming. However, again, check for access restrictions to certain public lands before heading out.

Q. – Do we have to “check in” shed antlers with G&F?

A. – No.

Q. – What do I do if I find antlers still on the skull?

A. – You are not permitted to pick up a winter kill skull with antlers until you call a G&F law enforcement officer and get permission. Then you must bring it in to be tagged and pay a $5.00 ISGT fee.

Q. – May I collect antlers from a road kill or natural mortality?

A. – No, but you may get permission after contacting a G&F law enforcement officer and purchase an Interstate Game Tag (ISGT).

Q. – What if I want to sell shed antlers or give them to a friend?

A. – Wyoming residents do not have to get an ISGT to sell or give shed antlers to another person.

Q. – What if I want to sell antlers in Wyoming that I legally possessed in another state?

A. – All shed antlers, antlers on a skull plate, or a mounted head, from another state that are to be sold in Wyoming must get prior approval from a Game and Fish law enforcement officer to come into Wyoming. All antlers on a skull plate, or mounted heads, must have an ISGT before their sale.
